Dear Parents and Carers,

Just a short note today.

Temperature testing

In order to protect the small number of pupils attending in Woodingdean and the staff supporting them we have started daily temperature testing on arrival. This will mean that if a child does have a temperature we can return them home immediately to avoid potential transmission of the virus.

This will be particularly important because, while special schools will not reopen soon, if the government starts to relax some current restrictions, there will be an increased risk of infection through people being out and about more.

Tomorrow

Enjoy the Bank Holiday weekend as far as you can given we all have to stay safe. Celebrate VE Day and our veterans. As someone whose late Dad was in the RAF in Bomber Command it will be an interesting and important occasion.

Take care and stay safe,

Adrian Carver
Executive Headteacher
